His implementation of sustainable practices earned LEED certification and elevated guest satisfaction.

Earlier in his career, Miravete served as General Manager for the Puerto Vallarta Tourism Board, where he oversaw a $10.8 million joint promotional campaign that resulted in a significant increase in visitor arrivals to the Vallarta-Nayarit destination.

“It is a true privilege to join Las Alamandas, a property that exemplifies the spirit of Mexico’s natural beauty and authentic hospitality,” said Miravete. “I am honored to lead this extraordinary destination and build upon its legacy while crafting new experiences that resonate with today’s luxury traveler.”

Las Alamandas, set on a 2,000-acre private ecological reserve with only 18 suites and four private beaches, has long been recognized as one of Mexico’s most exclusive hideaways. Under Miravete’s leadership, the resort will continue its commitment to personalized service, environmental stewardship, and unparalleled privacy for its discerning guests.
